INTRODUCTION

Welcome message from the Federal Minister for Health and Women, Maria Rauch-Kallat

Animals and keeping them in an environment suitable for the respective species have always had an important status for the people in Austria. A new and modern Federal Animal Protection Act thus came into effect on 1 January 2005, which provides protection for all animals in Austria according to the latest scientific knowledge.

The centrepiece of the new law is the full responsibility of the owner or keeper of the animals and clear requirements will have to be fulfilled. Taking together all the aspects covered, it is my conviction that the new Austrian welfare act could serve as an example for many other countries.

In the area of animal production we have to consider the roles, expectations and responsibilities across the entire food chain, starting from primary production, including food industry, retail and consumers. This is vital to create a combination of effective and competitive livestock production, which satisfies the needs of animals at a high standard and society as a whole.

Encouraged by dialogue with Animal Welfare organisations and other stakeholders as well as by the result of a recent "Eurobarometer" survey on attitudes of consumers towards the welfare of farmed animals, the Community Action Plan on the Protection and Welfare of Animals 2006-2010 will be presented early in 2006 by the European Commission.

The Conference will build on these recent activities and will cover consumer expectations, motivations of producers and retailers, role of animal welfare organisations, the international dimension of animal welfare and the socioeconomic aspects of implementing animal welfare standards.

I am looking forward to our discussions at the conference and I do hope that the Austrian initiative will contribute to establish a coherent animal welfare policy within the European Community.

Yours, Maria Rauch-Kallat Federal Minister for Health and Women
